HER COACHMAN SHOT HER. A Young, Rich and Pretty Illinois Girl Engaged in a Duel With a Colored Man.

CHICAGO, Jan. 8 .- A Herald special from Jacksonville, Ill., says: Miss Fannie Keener of this city was shot and mortally wounded last night on the street by Nathan Pasten, a colored never rendered more attractive than it apman. She returned the fire and wounded the negro so badly that he will probably die. For a long time the affairs of Miss Keener, who is a young, beautiful and wealthy white girl, and Pasten her colored coachman, have been the gossip of the town. Some time ago Pasten went to Iowa, and while he was there Miss Keener sent the negro a large amount of valuable property. Miss Keener remained here where she has been living with her brother. It was thought there would be nothing more between Miss Keener and Pasten, but vesterday morning the negro returned to Jacksonville and at once proceeded to the home of Miss Keener, where he was met by Tom Keener, who ordered the negro away. Pasten turned to go, but as he turned met Miss Keener and a young man named Bancroft. Without warning the negro drew a pistol and began shooting, first at Bancroft, who was twice wounded, and white. and at either end of the table were oval then at Miss Keener, who promptly returned the fire, both being wounded. Miss Keener was shot though the lungs and hips and is in a very critical condition. Pasten was shot in the arm and head. At this juncture Tom Keener and a colored boy named James Brown took a hand, clubbing Pasten, until disarmed by the crowd of people drawn to the spot. Pasten is in jail, but so terribly injured that it is thought he cannot recover. It was said that Miss Keener could scarcely live through the night.

In a long letter describing his experience he says that the colonists now number about 110, mostly old men and women, who have become so embittered by their disappoint-ment that they are hard to live with. If these people had means to leave there would not be twenty remaining at the place, but having put their money in the general fund they can get nothing back. All are paid for work in time checks, which can't be cashed because the directors claim there are no funds. Remiey says some of the land owned by the colony is good, but the colonists persist in planting eastern seed and they have thus regularly lost their crops, The regular diet of the colonists is black-eyed beans and corn bread three times a day, and most are too poor to buy any meat. He pro-nounces most of the statements in the Credit Foncier, the official newspaper organ, as falsehoods, as the colony has nothing to offer to new members but hard work and poor food.

IN SOCIETY.

The First State Dinner at the White House-Other Events of Interest. The President and Mrs. Harrison gave their first state dinner at the White House last evening at 8 o'clock. The executive mansion was of parlor palms, two of the mantels were banked with cut flowers and the others were set with foliage plants and blossoming annuals. The entire suite of state drawing rooms were in gala attire and the effect was always most charming. The state dining room had its mantels banked with cut flowers—carnations, tulips, azaleas and camelias, fringed with long-stemmed Bonsilene roses. Great trees of blooming white azaleas stood in the window recesses. The table displayed the usual designs in modified tones of color. The ship of state that always appears at the cabinet dinner was not so large a vessel and was made entirely of white carnations. The rigging was twined with smilax, with which the chandeliers were high round pieces of roses, pale yellow and white, and at either end of the table were oval cushions of white roses. The tapers were shaded by white and yellow shades, and the artistic mingling of white and yellow in all the designs of the table was gratefully effective. At each cover was the name card, bearing the national crest in gold. The bouquets were alternate Marechal Nell and Nephetos roses, tied respectively with yellow and white ribbons. The boutonnieres were of the same kind of roses as the ladies' bouquets. Small baskets of salted stood five wine glasses. The dinner was served by a local caterer and the menu was as follows: Oysters; green turtle soup; salmon, with potatoes and cucum-ber salad; bouche a la financiere; filet of beef la jardiniere; superme de voli; terrapin, tary Blaine and Mrs. Windom, Secretary Windom and Mrs. Miller, Secretary Proctor and Mrs. Wanamaker, Attorney General Miller and Mrs. and Miss Tracy, Postmaster General Wana-maker and Mrs. Noble, Secretary Tracy and Mrs. Rusk, Secretary Noble and Mrs. Reed, Secretary Rusk and Mrs. Sherman, Mr. Speaker Reed and Mrs. Cockrell, Senator Sherman and Mrs. Hale, Gen. The recent change made by the Washington stock exchange in the system of quotations of local stocks and securities is believed to be in the line of greater simplicity. Instead of quoting at par stock that has only been partially paid up the paid-up value is given. As, for instance, the par value of the Eckington electric railway stock is $50. Only $30 has been paid in so far, and in the quotations of the exchange this stock is quoted at $30, with the premium added. The same is true of the stock of the Washington loan and trust company and that of the American security and trust company and other stocks. ALEXANDRIA.

AUGUSTA'S ROMANCE.

Noble When She Was a Princess.

Story of Her Love for a Young French

A member of the suite of one of the bestknown princes of Germany tells a romantic story concerning the dead Empress Augusta, and it is believed that it has never before been given to the public. Augusta was a princess in the petty court of Weimar, where she was MANUFACTRING COMPANY, Limited, 1105 7th st. given to the public. Augusta was a princess in hedged about with all the straight-laced etiquette the small German principalities affected. When she was seventeen she was a romantic girl and had learned by heart the stories of the of Louis XIV, and so well had she read that she was prepared to fall in love with any man who might first appeal to her sense of beauty; but the rigid surveillance of her ducal father and mother made male acquaintances almost impossible. previous half century's gallantries at the court mother made male acquaintances almost im-enough to die a young French noble scion of a more or less long lineage stopped at the court of Weimar in the progress of a pleasure jaunt from Auvergne. He remained for some weeks at this place and became a favorite of the duke. He was accomplished, handsome and a dare devil. At a court ball shortly following his arrival the Frenchman met the princess. They were permitted to become partners and in dulged in mutual love at first sight.

Before this romantic spirit had lived long which took the form of secret meetings in the palace grounds. The only people aware of these trysts were the maid and valet of the principals, who served as the medium through which the correspondence was carried on and the meetings arranged. The maid, whether through carelessness or spite, lost one of the letters intrusted to her and it was picked up by he duchess, mother of Augusta, before the maid could recover it.

The letter was impassioned and eloquent, burning with the love song of the smitten Parisian and filled with all those pretty words that came in with the grand monarch. This was all very well, for the two were young, but it led up to the suggestion of an elope-ment. It implored a flight and pictured the ideal life of love on the pastoral lands of the new America.

The duke and the duchess were consume with rage at this discovery and poured forth their indignation in unstinted volume. So high did feeling run in the court that the ducal chamberlain challenged the Frenchman to a duel, and the lover fell, mortally wounded. As by proximity to Washington makes the land tax of the county especially disproportionate to the land tax in other counties of the state. The ne fell the Frenchman tore open his tunic and there, pressed against his heart, was a hand-kerchief belonging to the princess. Toward it his hand feebly moved and he died at the moment he had seized the lace and was strugnew assessment is intensifying this feeling and gling to carry it to his lips.

The duchess was so affected by the incident that she silently placed her handkerchief on the breast of the young man as he lay in the coffin and it was buried with him. His body was covered with roses, strewn upon him by the devoted Augusta, and she, from swoons and sobs, became hysterical and almost crazed For weeks the princess sobbed about the palace, until her parents were convinced that her sorrow must have some relief or she would be-

They suggested a marriage with Prince William of Prussia, and the princess gave her in-different consent, careless and thoughtless what might become of her. With William it was a matter of equal unimportance, for he had first been crossed in a love affair and he was heart-

There was no misunderstanding between them on the subject of their marriage. It was an affair exclusively of the parents and of an obedient, but disconsolate youth and maiden During their lifetime the Emperor William and the Empress Augusta maintained toward each other the most perfect and severe politeness. They were friends, they respected each other. but that was all. They were not lovers and they could not tear from their hearts the memories of their early love and their early disappointment. The empress always pre-ferred French books, ideas, dress and sentiment, and it was her favorite language. The influence of that unhappy loss remained with her until the last moment and she doubtless carried the sweet regrets to the grave. Years have effaced remembrance of the affair and it is safe to say that less than sonages knew of it today.

ANNEXATION SENTIMENT. A Dispatch from Washington that has Made a Sensation in Canada.

A few years ago the Toronto Mail, the organ of the Dominion government, went back on the conservative party and has since opposed the government of Sir John Macdonald. Yesterday the Toronto newspapers printed dispatches from Washington which say that Edward Farrar, editor-in-chief of that paper, supplied the Hoar committee with information tending to show that annexation sentiment was growing in Canada and that annexation was likely to be promoted by total want of action the two countries. The Globe says:

"In our dispatches from Washington will be found one of the most astounding disclosures ever made in connection with Canadian politics. The revelation is that the opponents of unrestricted reciprocity have been propagating in Washington the opinion that annexation will be soon sought by Canadians if unre-stricted reciprocity be withheld. To this ne-farious device the enemies of Canada's liberal party have resorted in the hope of inducing Congress to defeat the Butterworth bill. That bill proposes, not a customs union but just such favored by Sir Richard Cartwright and his political associates. Were it adopted by Con-gress the offer of an acceptable plan for conti-nental free trade would be distinct, and no Canadian party proposing to refuse the offer could survive a general election. To balk the Butterworth bill is therefore necessary to the salvation of Canadian restrictionism.

Suing For a Pass. Miss Caroline E. Dodge of Attleboro' in the Massachusetts supreme court sued the Boston and Providence railroad for a pass. She claims that in a deed given by her grandfather, J. C. Dodge, in 1836 to the railroad company for land in Dodgeville, there was a clause giving the old gentleman's family, his heirs and assigns free passes over the road. Miss Dodge asserts that she is not now allowed to ride free but used to when a young girl. The company denies that the clause in the deed applied to other than Dodge's immediate family. The Miller et al. agt. E. M. Daggett et al., which involved one-half of the city of Fort Worth. The decision is declared to be worth $5,000,000 to Fort Worth. The value of the land in controversy at the time the suit was taken to the Supreme Court was placed at $8,000,000. The case has been in litigation since 1866. The three sets of claim-ants are by this decision deprived of all hope of recovery of any of the land. Lieut. Spicer Shot.

From the New York Sun, Today. Lieut, William M. Spicer of the United States marine corps was taken to the marine hospital in Brooklyn last night with a musket ball in his chest. Although the doctors were unable to reach the bullet the wound is not considered mortal. Lieut. Spicer, who is thirty-five years old, was accidently shot between 7 and 8 o'clock by Robert Benson, the fifteen-year-old son of Lieut. Benson, also of the marine corps. Lieut. Spicer and young Benson, each armed with an old army musket, started out to make war on the howling dogs which infest the dumps in the rear of the barracks and make night hideous. On reaching the dumps they started in different directions. Young Benson soon halted and putting the musket to his shoulder. halted and putting the musket to his shoulder fired at an object which he saw approaching him and which he took for one of the vagran curs. The object turned out to be his triend the lieutenant. The boy was terribly shocked by his mistake Lieut.
